Field Research

Life Video Creation

A service is offered to create a life video using photographs, and family members can record their messages. However, most family members choose only to provide photos and do not record their voices

Heavenly Mailbox

Messages can be left on a message board or written on a letter and placed in an envelope to be sent through a ceremonial process. The envelope carries the sentiments and words of the sender, symbolizing a connection to loved ones

Life Crystals

Portions of ashes are transformed into Life Crystals, which can be kept or stored in a designated space. Various forms and designs are available for selection

Digital Funeral Museum

The weather simulates realistic shifts between sunshine and rain, cycling through the seasons to evoke the passage of time, accompanied by soothing music.

Clicking on arrows navigates to the next scene, while swiping left or right allows users to explore different areas. Clicking on icons provides access to content related to funeral practices

Round 1 - Quiz True death is being forgotten

How do you wish to remember those who have passed? After your death, how would you like people to remember you?

The Form of Nostalgia

I hope they will sing a song, revisit old paintings and works, and include recordings of songs they've sung before

I've kept photos, clothes, and letters written to me by others as mementos to remember them by

Leaving behind some belongings allows for cherished memories to be shared—reliving past moments with family and friends, sparking nostalgic conversations

How One Hopes to Be Remembered

An AI representation could serve as a way to preserve memories, and I find that quite comforting. I would hope it feels realistic and that it has its own distinct identity

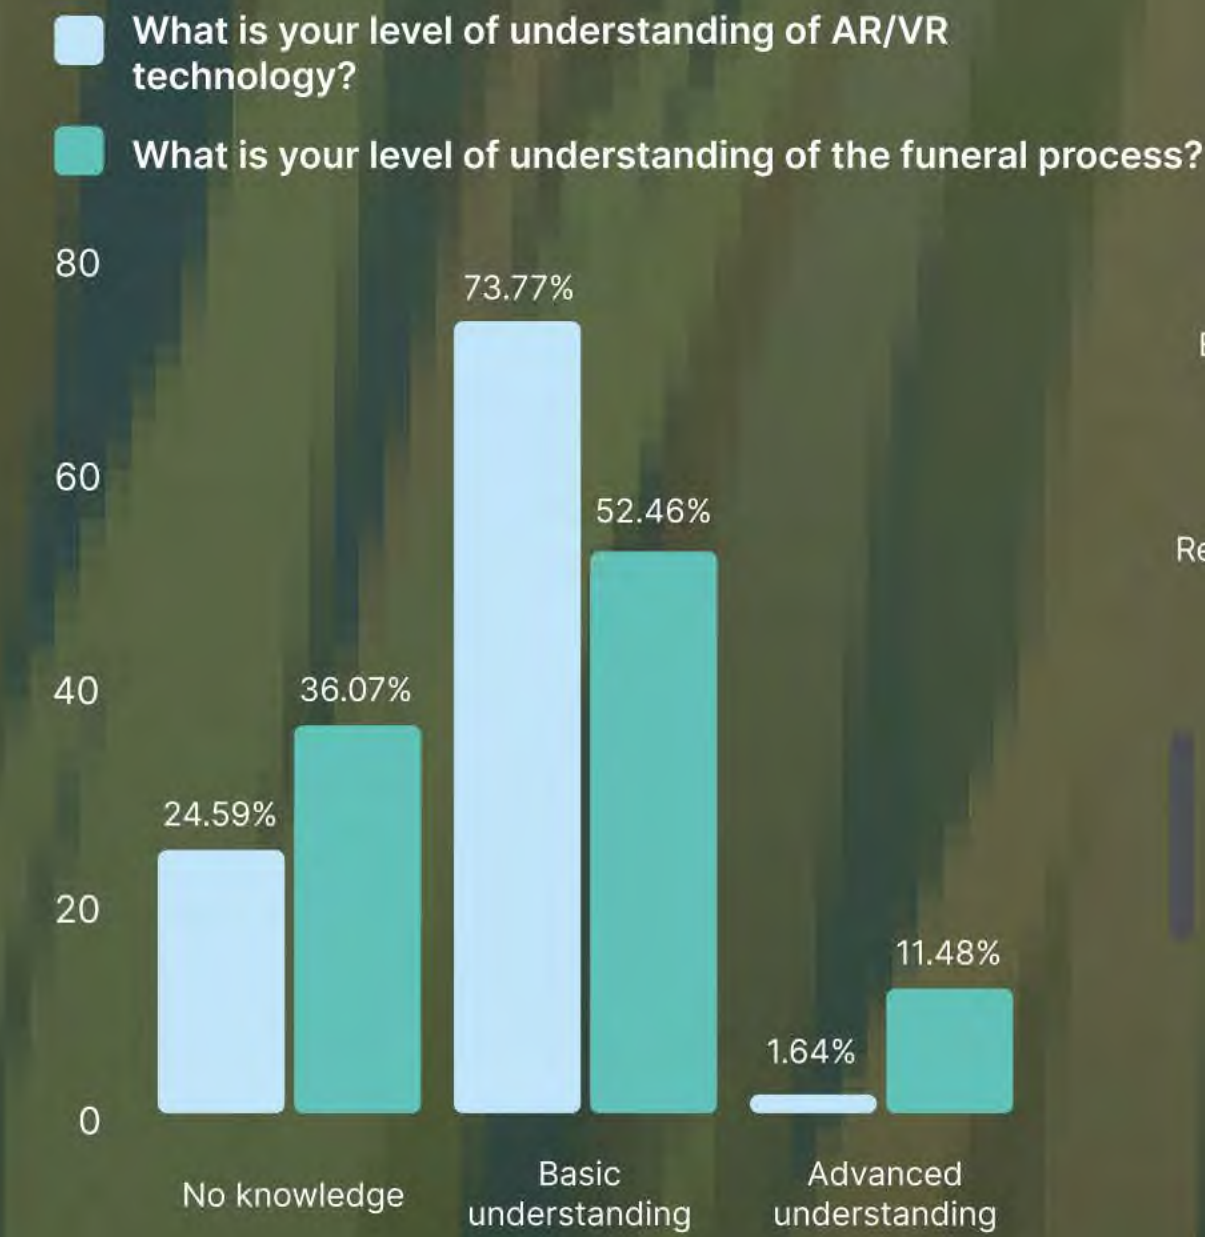

I also hope my gravestone will be more personalized

I would like to have my life story written as an article and published on an open platform, allowing others to read and reflect on my journey

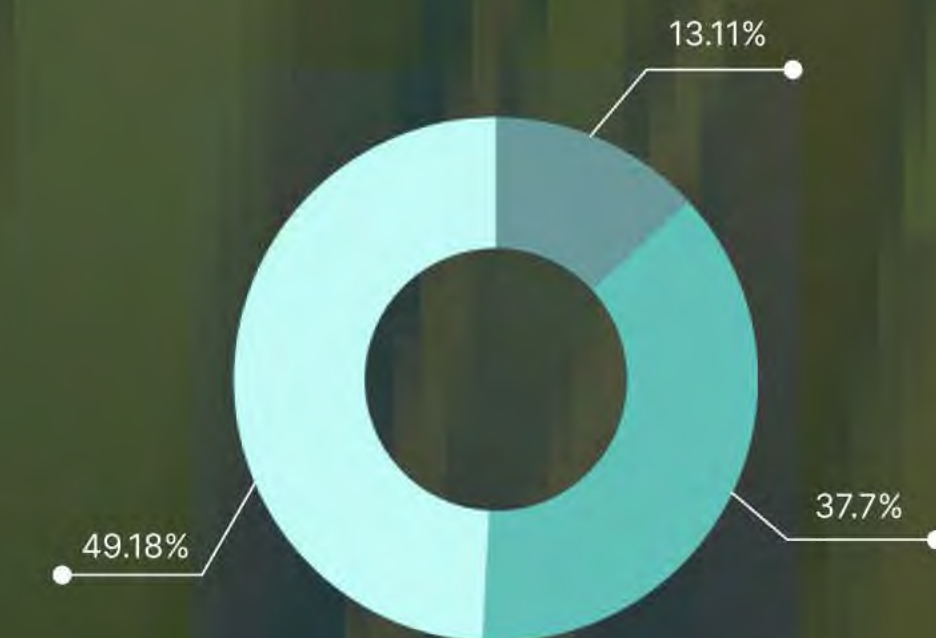

The Legacy of Memories

It's important to share stories about my family's past, and I hope these narratives can be passed down through generations

I would like my siblings to gather together for a memorial. It's a rare opportunity to come together, especially since we're often too busy with our daily lives

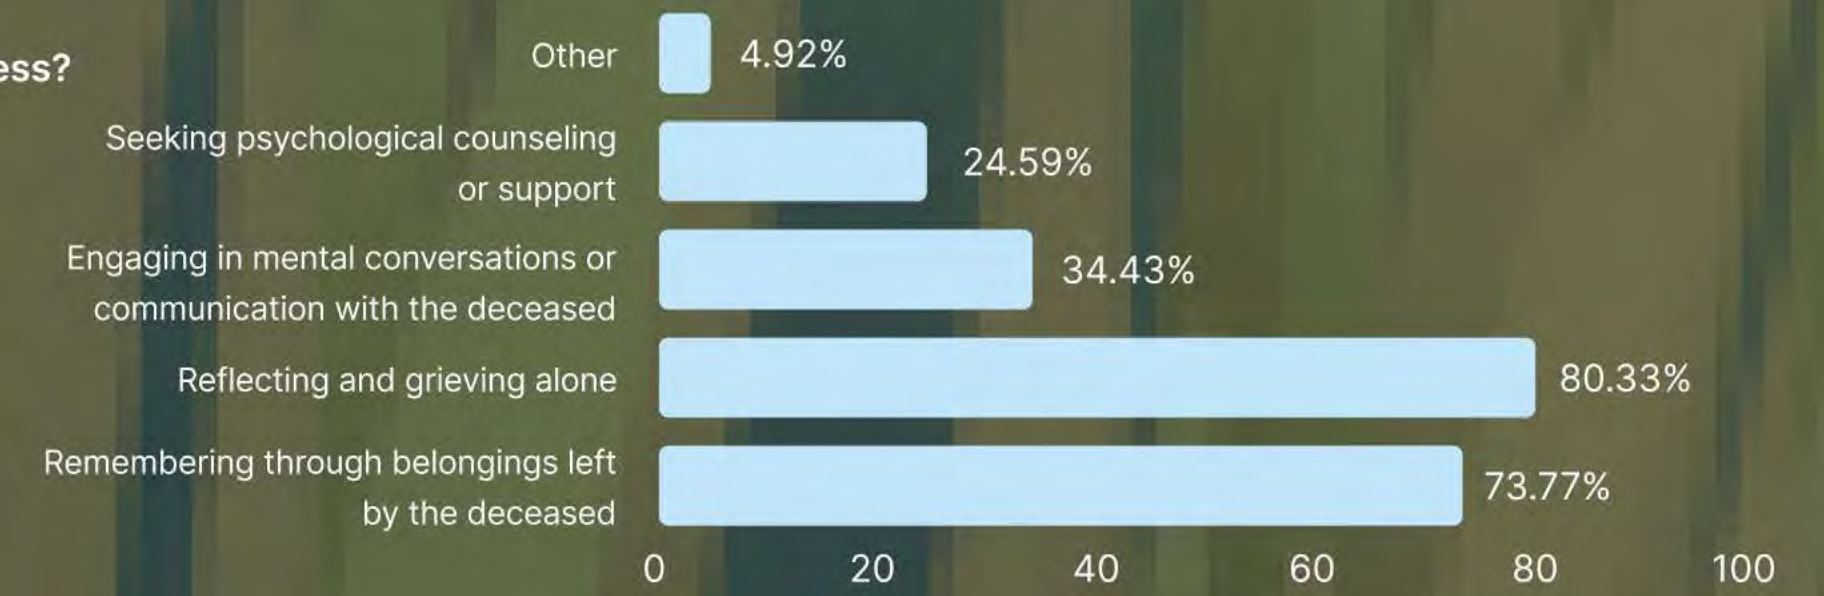

Regarding funeral processes, most people have limited understanding. Similarly, when it comes to the use of AR/VR, the majority of people are at a basic level of understanding

Are you prepared for your own death?

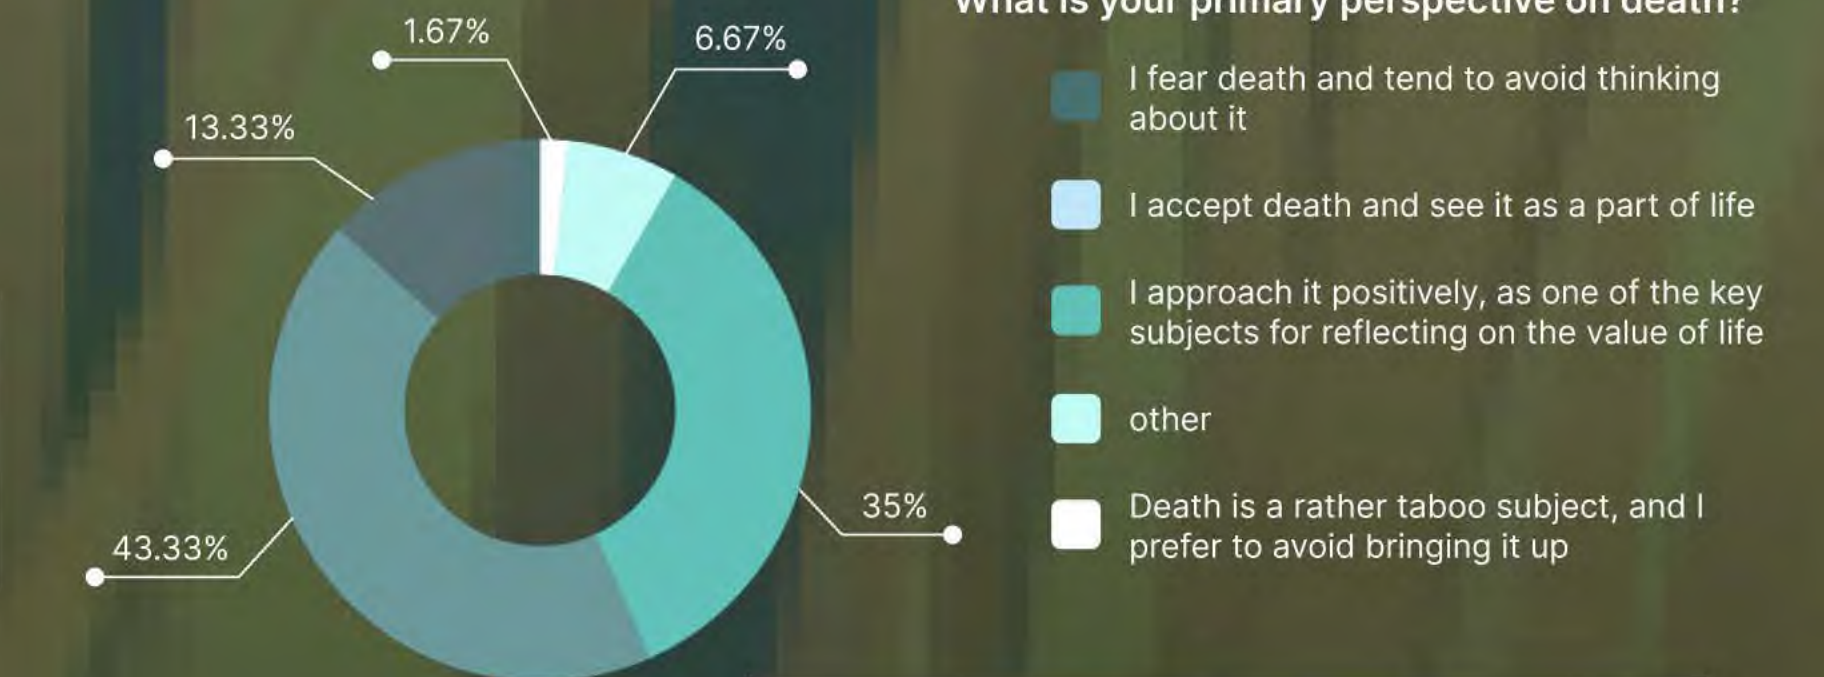

- Yes, I engage in personal or behavioral planning and preparation
- I'm uncertain, but I would consider engaging in the necessary reflection and actions
- No, I have never considered it or don't feel the need to prepare

How do you cope with the death of a family member or friend? (Select all that apply)

When remembering loved ones, most people choose to reflect through belongings and memories, or express their feelings alone. Some also seek comfort by imagining conversations with the deceased or through psychological counseling

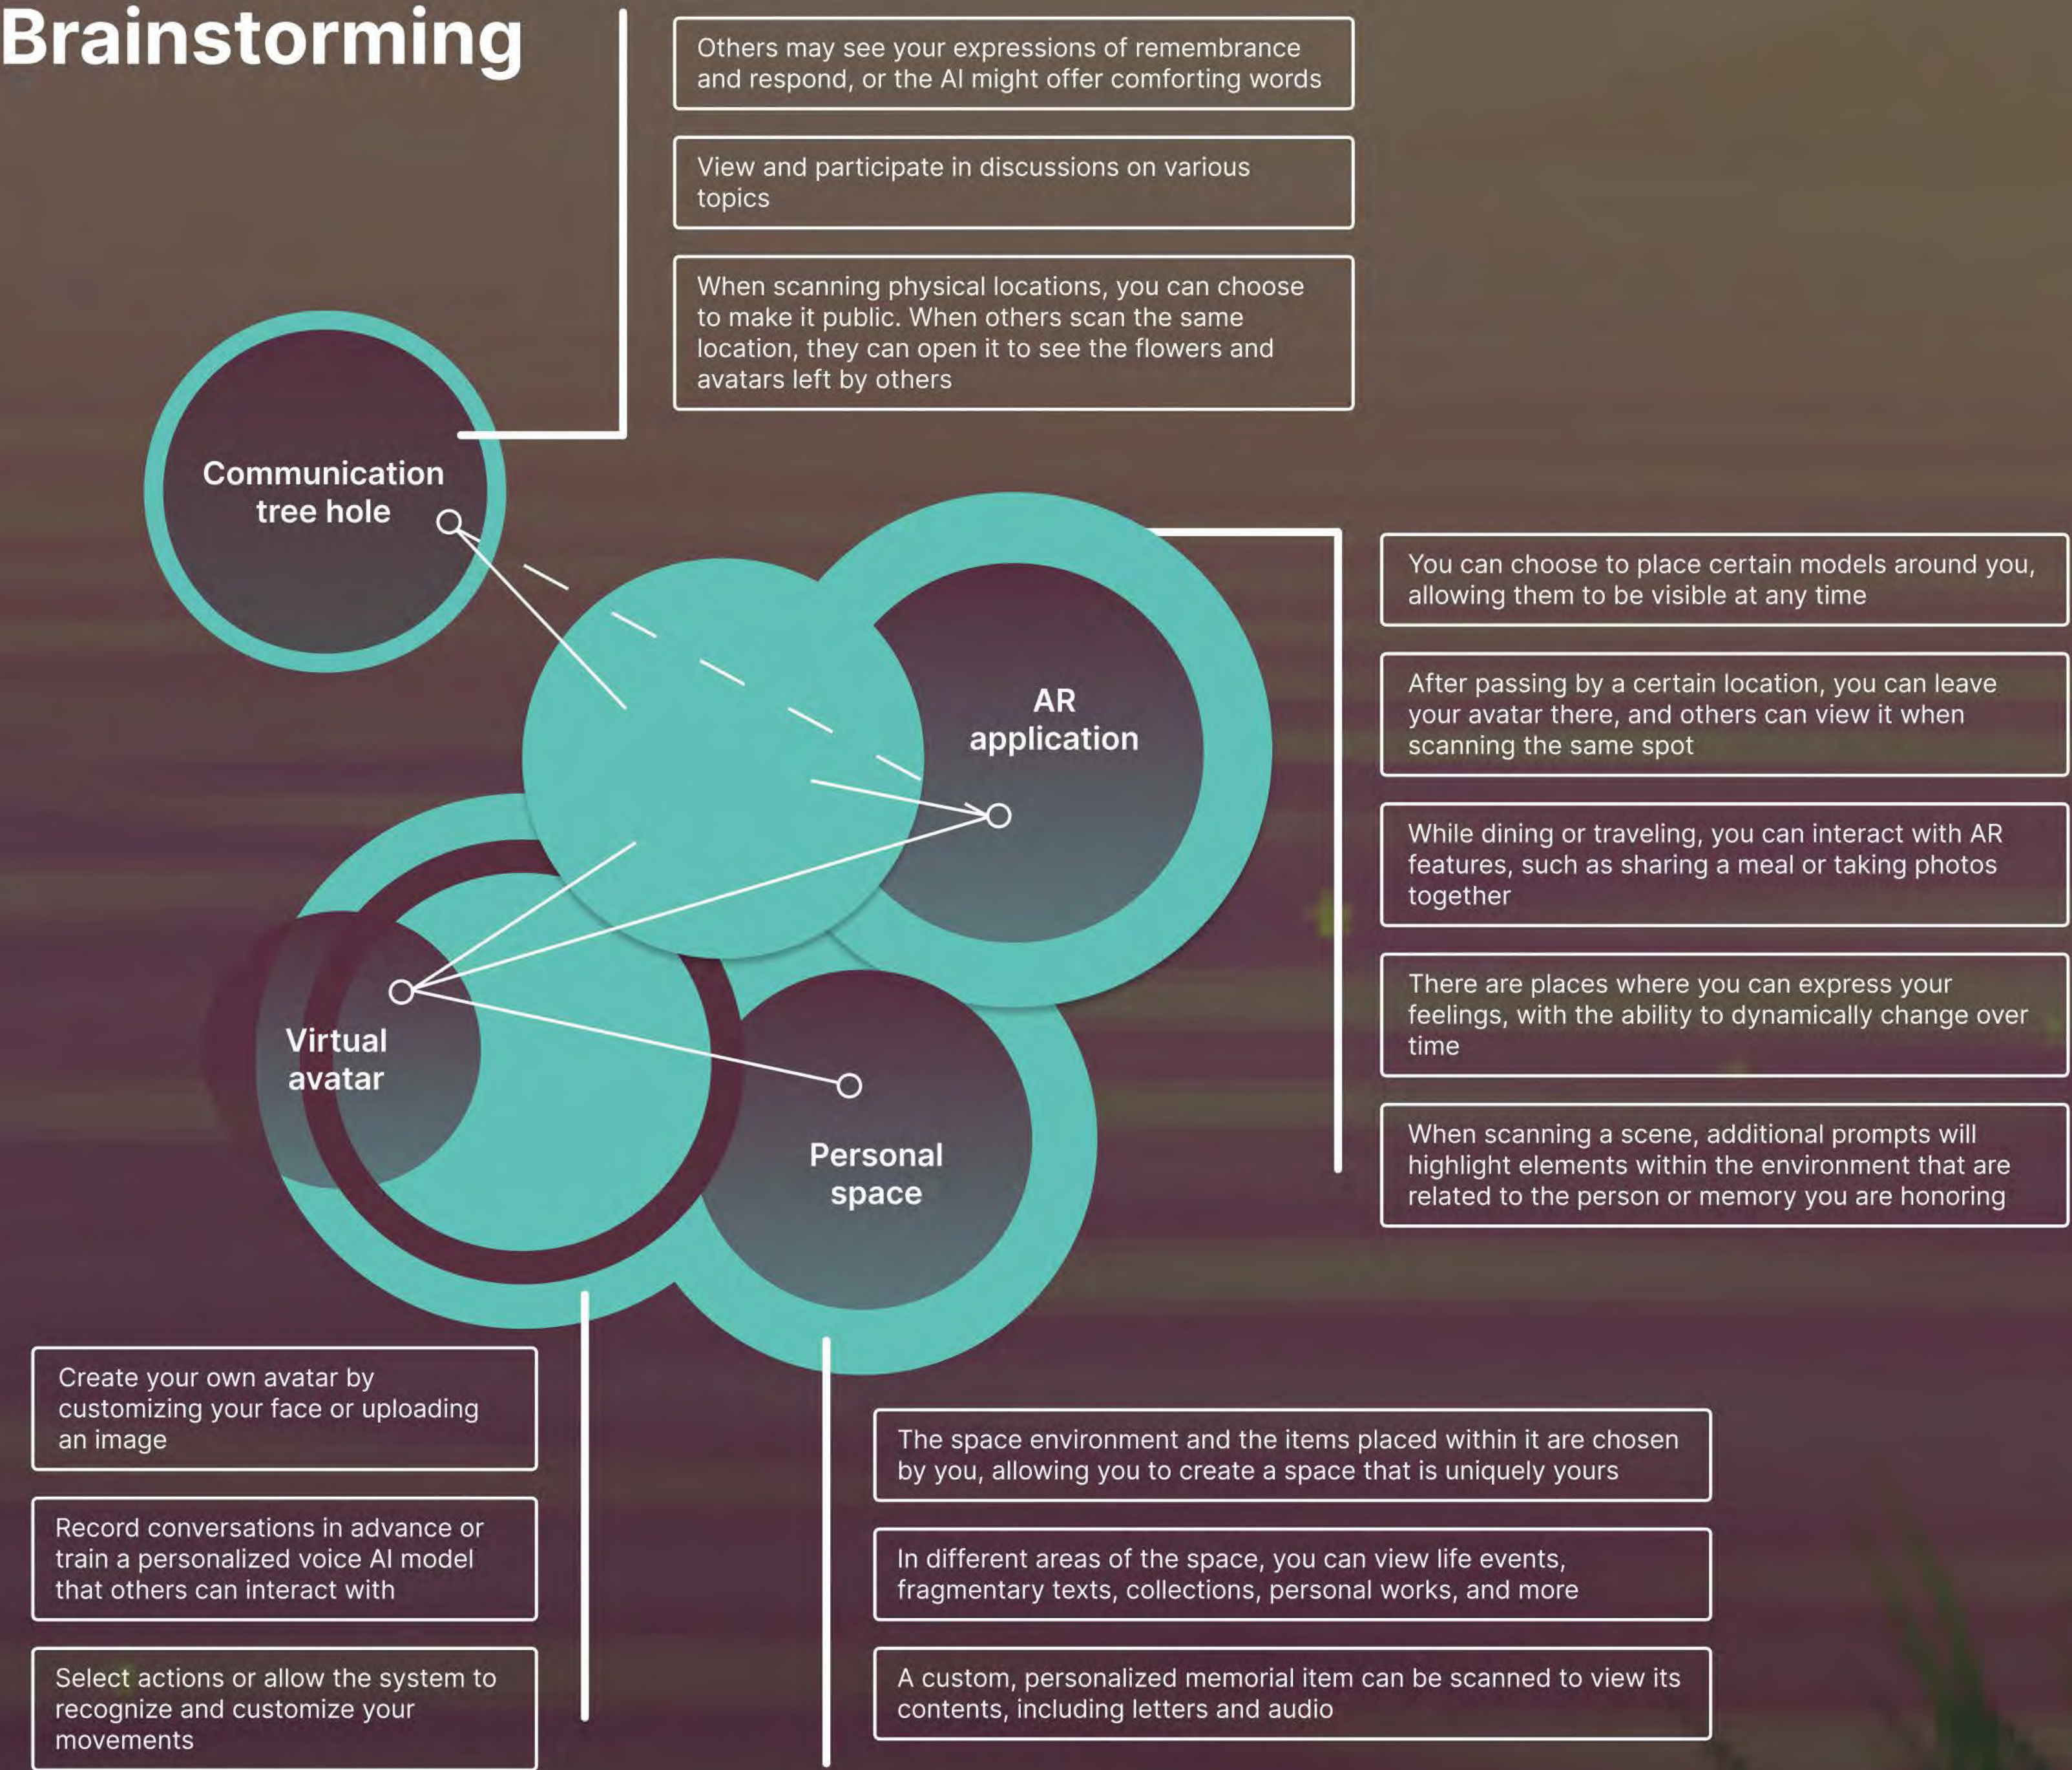

What is your primary perspective on death?

The majority of people have a positive attitude toward death, with only a few expressing fear and reluctance to discuss it. Most people accept death and view it as a natural part of life, with some even willing to engage in deeper reflection and discussion about it.

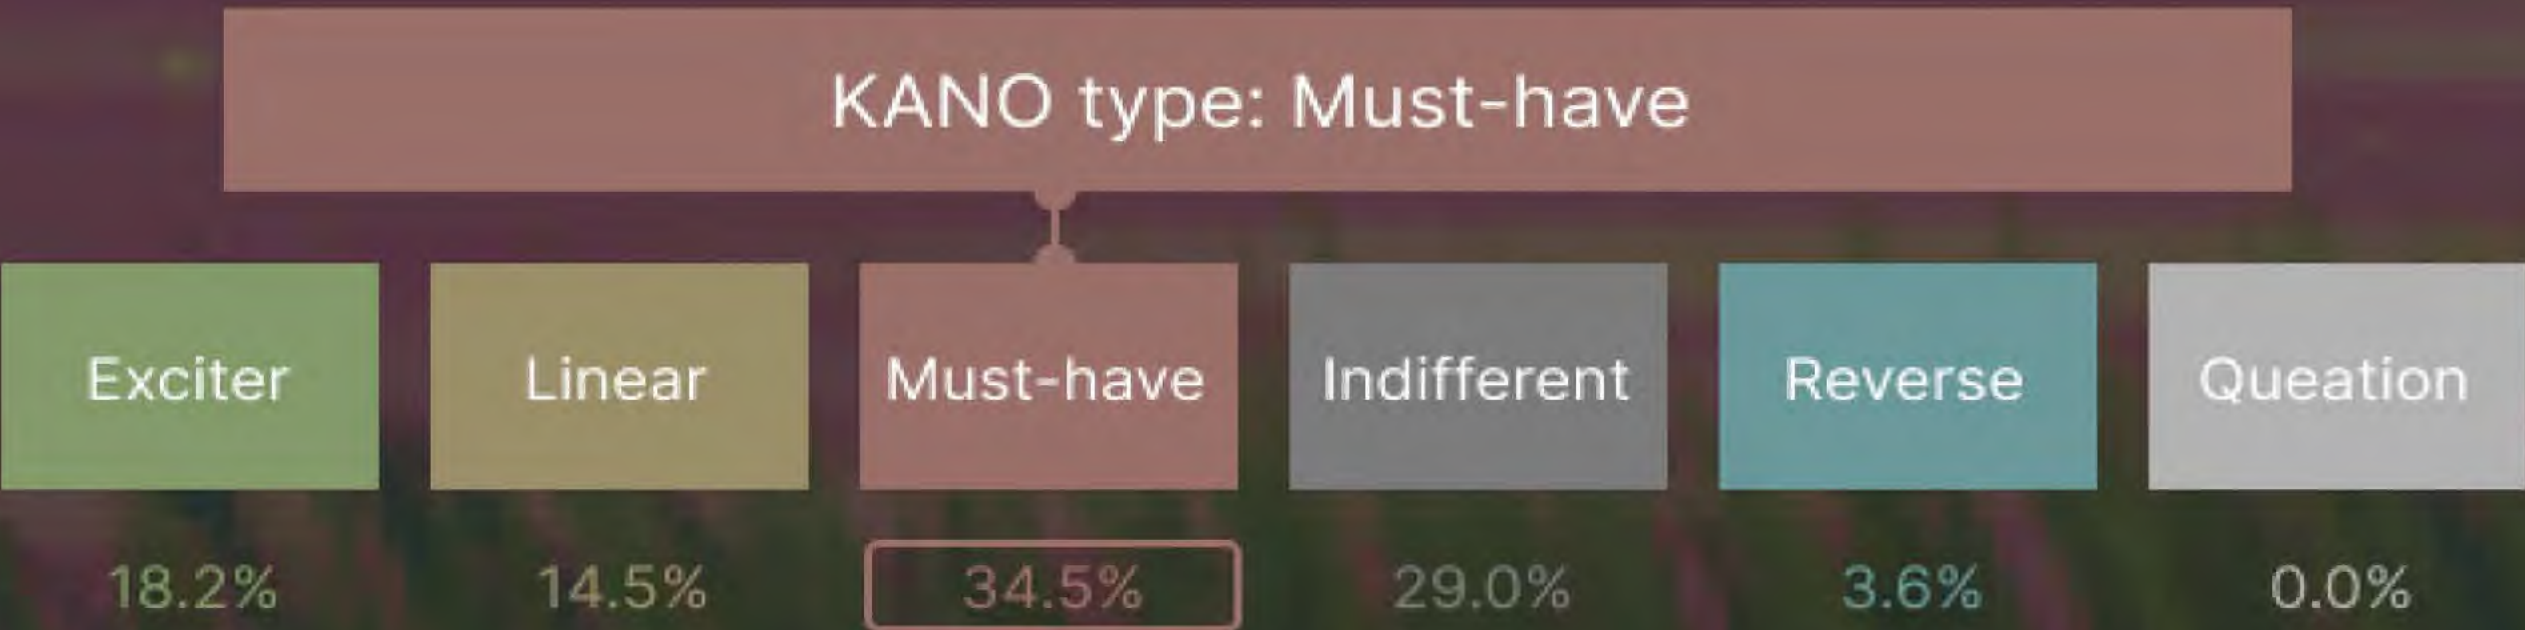

Nearly half of people have thought about how to prepare for their own death, and among those who haven't considered it, most are open to contemplating the subject

AR exploration - First-perspective

By using a mobile phone to scan scenes and recognize objects, I can experience AR and see my favorite models and images appear realistically around me. The ability to interact with them and the flexibility of the experience are greatly enhanced.

I can move closer or farther to view them, and engage in different interactions across various scenes. With dynamic effects (such as model movement and video playback), the experience becomes rich and natural.
